LIBERTYVILLE FAIRS TO BE DISCONTINUED

Supervisors Vote Against Reimbursing Fair for Debts

HAD LOSS EVERY YEAR

"There will be no county fair this year in Lake County. We will straighten out the books and turn over the county fair property to the creditors who have been holding their bills for a long time. So far as the fair is concerned there will absolutely be no fair in 1923."

This statement was made by President Woodin of the Lake County Agricultural Association brought to a final decision after for some time to have the county board appropriate $3,000 to county fair and tide it along for the coming year.

It was after the board on Monday voted 22 to 11 not to give the fair association $3,000 that Mr. Woodin, who had made a plea for assistance addressed the board with the above remarks and immediately thereafter he and Mr. Corlett and John Wirtz, secretary, walked out of the supervisors' rooms very much disappointed at the failure to receive assistance for the fair this year. Messrs. William, Wirtz and Corlett had addressed the board and asked that they be given assistance to put the fair over this year.

Supervisor Eger spoke in favor and made a motion that the county help the fair to the extent of $3,000, arguing that "if we drop the fair now it cannot be picked up again," and that he felt it was all right for the board to help this year and then let the fair association stand on its own feet, the understanding being given now never to assist in the future.

John Swanebrough, a new member, addressed the board at length, explaining he could not understand why the fair had not been able to meet its own expenses that the attendance seemed large enough and he felt they should be able to carry it on themselves.

Supervisor Mawman, said that he was strongly for the fair but that the law said that the county had no right to give more than $300 to its support. "I oppose it," said Mr. Mawman, "because it is an illegal act. There are lots of places where we put that $3,000 where it will do much good and I doubt if it is going to do any good if we put it in the fair association. We know the financial condition of this county and none of the board know it better than the rest of us." Turning to Mr. Meyer of the finance committee Mr. Mawman developed the fact that the county had borrowed $170,000 in anticipation warrants at the present time on the coming taxes. Adding Mr. Mawman said "we cannot afford to spend even $2,000 on this sort of proposition, especially if it isn't legal."

Supervisor Maether, said that he was not opposed to the fair but when such a sum is asked for in face of the legal opinion saying that the county has no right to do so he does not see how it was possible for the board to act.

Last year he said the state appropriation was cut from $2400 to $1200 and this naturally worked against its success.

He admitted that the fair had been short for the last eight or nine years and he felt that if the $3000 was given this year they would not have to come back in the future.

The vote was taken, however, on a 22 to 11 against giving the fair association any appropriation. Thereupon Mr. Woodin made his statement credited above.

Woman's Club of Antioch

The package sale held last Saturday in the village hall was a very gratifying success. The neat sum of $65.25 was realized from the sale of the donated packages. The committee having this sale in charge is greatly pleased and encouraged by the generous response made to the effort to raise in this way a sum of money to be divided equally between the library and the Boy Scout organization. Everybody helped, the Woman's Club, friends of the library and the scouts, but much of the success of the sale was due to the efforts of the boys and girls. They brought packages and they bought packages and proved themselves genuine "boosters."

The Woman's Club believes in the boys and girls—hence its interest in the library and the Scout organization.

Owing to the storm of Saturday afternoon a few of the smaller packages remained unsold and will be turned over to the Camp Fire Girls to be sold by them at a bakery sale planned by them in the near future. Any help given the young people of the community is worth all its costs. In behalf of the Woman's Club we thank the friends who so generously assisted in making a success of the package sale.

Now let us get ready for clean-up week. A genuine, honest to goodness clean up that shall make Antioch the beauty spot nature intended it to be.

McCULLOUGH IS NEW HEAD OF SUPERVISORS

The closest contest ever waged for the chairmanship of the Lake county board of supervisors took place Monday when George McCullough of Warren township on the second ballot by a vote of 18 to 16 defeated Fred Kirschner of Cuba township for the coveted honor.

Showing how close the contest was it is of interest to notice that on the first ballot Kirschner received 17 votes, McCullough 16 and Heldridge one. When the second ballot was called for apparently one of the men who voted for Kirschner switched to McCullough and the man who voted for Heldridge also switched to McCullough thus giving Mr. McCullough a majority of 2 votes over the Cuba man.

BARTLETT IS WINNER IN HOT BATTLE FOR VILLAGE PRESIDENT

Entire Independent Party Sweeps Through to Victory With But One Exception; Hillebrand Defeats Runyard

LARGEST VOTE CAST IN VILLAGE ELECTION

By the largest vote ever cast at a village election for village solons, George Bartlett defeated Herbert Vos for president of the village board by a 255 to 181 majority, and carried the Independent party through to victory with the exception of Charles Runyard, who was defeated by William Hillebrand by a margin of two votes.

Frank Dunn polled the highest vote for trustee with 265, with J. B. Drom second with 224 and Mr. Hillebrand finished third with 208. W. F. Ziegler defeated J. Ernest Brook for the village treasurership with a 252 to 164 majority.

There was a total of 437 votes cast, 208 of which were cast by women voters and 229 by the men.

Mrs. Herbert Vos cast the first vote of the day and Mrs. Clara Wentworth cast the last vote at about one minute before 5 o'clock.

There were 303 voters who voted a "straight ticket." Bartlett received 186 of these votes, while Vos received 117. Of the 134 who voted a "split ticket," Bartlett received 69 and Vos 64.

The members who will compose the village board for the next semester are: President, George Bartlett; board members, Harry Osmond, Ray Webb, William Rosling, J. B. Drom, Frank Dunn and William Hillebrand; village clerk, Harry Isaacs, and village treasurer, William Ziegler.

The voters started their activity as early as 7 o'clock in the morning and continued, pouring into the polls throughout the day until the polls closed. A great majority of the votes were brought in by automobiles, and probably the hardest worker of the day was Mr. Bartlett. All through the day he continued to bring his friends and neighbors to the polls. Miss Clara Drom, daughter of J. Drom, candidate for board member, also did remarkably good work for the Independents, bringing many of the women voters to the polls.

Mr. Bartlett, in a statement issued last night, said that his policy for the coming term will be "a square deal for every man." Mr. Bartlett, on the Depot street parlor, expressed himself in favor of this improvement, but said that if the village is to bear an expense of $6,000 on this improvement that it will have to be a bond issue and require the consent of the public through the vote.

He expressed his opinion in regard to the lighting system, stating that inasmuch as 80 percent of the property owners signed a petition against this improvement, it was evident that they did not desire this expense at the present time, but thought that the project could be accomplished later.

The new president feels that the vehicle tax will receive early attention by the new board and that this is a means of raising revenue that does not seem to meet opposition.

"The Girl and the Case"

By Randall Parrish

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Answering an advertisement calling for a young man willing to engage in service of duty, Matthew West, ex-service man just returned from France, where he had been captain of engineers, meets Natalie Coolidge, widow of the advertisement, and without being instructed as to his probable duties, is engaged by her, and that same evening introduced to her friends as her fiancé.

CHAPTER II.—That night, in the Coolidge home, West is startled by the appearance in his room of a young woman whom he takes to be Natalie, but who escapes before he can be sure. Next morning Natalie tells West she has been troubled by some woman, apparently her double, who has been impersonating her.

CHAPTER III.—Percival Coolidge, Natalie's uncle and guardian, apparently is disconcerted by West's appearance as Natalie's fiancé, and the feeling of uneasiness is mutual. Natalie Coolidge and West plan a visit of charity to a poor and remote section of the city.

CHAPTER IV.—Leaving West in the car, Natalie and Coolidge enter a small cottage, remaining a length of time which causes him some uneasiness. Before they return, West secures information which leads him to believe Coolidge is deceiving Natalie, and has ulterior motives.

CHAPTER V.—On the party's return to the Coolidge home, Natalie informs West she has been mistaken in her suspicions concerning her "double," and that she has no further need for his services. West is astounded, but helpless. He loves her, and gives it as his belief that Coolidge was murdered, and about convinces West he is right.

CHAPTER VI.—On his way out of the grounds, West hears a revolver shot, and investigates. He finds Percival Coolidge dead, apparently a suicide. The inquiry so determines. In the city West is visited by Sexton, an old servant of the Coolidges, who tells him he has been abruptly dismissed for no apparent reason. He gives it as his belief that Coolidge was murdered, and about convinces West he is right.

CHAPTER VII.—Sexton has overheard a telephone conversation in the Coolidge home, in which a man demands that West's presence immediately. He gives an address, and with Sexton, West, his suspicion of things, and his knowledge of the Coolidge murder, and the fact that Coolidge had died about the reason for the trip to the cottage, visits the place. It is a disreputable saloon.

CHAPTER VIII.—West is taken by surprise, knocked out, separated from Sexton, and comes to his senses to find himself bound and gagged, and confronted by a man named Hobart, whom West knows to be the man who had rented the house which Natalie visited. The man tells him he (West) is interesting in his plans and if he persists will be done away with. West refuses any compromise. Hobart sends for Natalie, hoping she can induce West to give up his quest.

CHAPTER IX.—Natalie releases West from his bonds and assures him that she has no need for his assistance. Her action almost convinces West she has guilty knowledge of Percival Coolidge's murder. He denies Hobart, and the two, with two companions, attempt to kill him. After a terrible fight West leaps from the window.

CHAPTER X.—West succeeds in eluding his pursuers, finds Sexton bound and gagged, releases him, and the two escape. In the alley Sexton picks up a lady's penknife, which he gives to West.

CHAPTER XI.—Concealed in the knife West finds a note in a woman's hand writing appealing to the police to "search the Seminoles." West takes the note to the police headquarters, where he finds an old friend he had known in France, Mr. Adams. They find that the Seminoles in a yacht over a by Percival Coolidge.

CHAPTER XII.—Adams learns the Seminoles is tied up at a pier. West goes over there alone, is decamped aboard, made a prisoner, and the vessel sails.

CHAPTER XIII.—His captors inform West that they are determined his activities in the Coolidge case shall be ended. The man deny that Natalie is aboard the vessel. That night, with West locked in his cabin, the boat is abandoned by its crew. West breaks out of the cabin, finds and releases Natalie, and the two escape on a life raft. The Seminoles goes down.

CHAPTER XIV.—On the raft West becomes convinced that another woman resembling her wonderfully has been impersonating Natalie, and that the latter is absolutely innocent of any wrongdoing. He realizes that the strong interest he has felt in the case springs only from the love he has felt for Natalie. He tells her, and she admits she has felt a strong affection for him almost from their first meeting.

CHAPTER XIV

The Coming of Dawn.

West leaned far out, and could perceive little except a bare, shapeless outline.

"Did you make it? Are you all right?"

"Yes, I'm safe enough. But—but Captain West, I want you to come."

"I'm coming. Watch out now—good! Here goes."

He made the plunge, coming up to the surface close beside the raft, the edge of which he quickly grasped with his hands. He swam steadily, urging the unwieldy raft away from the menacing side of the vessel, driven by the necessity of escaping the inevitable suction when she went down. Gradually the distance widened, until there extended a considerable waste of water between the two. Satisfied that they were far enough away for safety, he clambered cautiously upon the platform, the girl as carefully making room for him on the few dry planks.

There was nothing to say, nothing to do; for the moment at least they were safe, and perhaps morning would bring rescue. Suddenly West straightened up, aroused by a new interest—surely that last wave went entirely over the yacht's rail; he could see the white gleam of spray as it broke; and yes, there was another! Then, almost without warning, the end came. She went down bow first, the stern lifting until West could discern the dark outlines of the screw, and then dropped like a stone, vanishing almost instantly.

"That is the last of the Seminoles," West said, feeling the necessity of strengthening her. "But it is nothing to frighten you. We are safe enough here. But you must keep your nerve; we may be alone for hours yet before we are picked up."

"You are sure we will be?"

"The probability is altogether in our favor," he insisted, as much to encourage himself as her. "This is Lake Michigan in summer time, and boats are plying everywhere. We shall surely be sighted by something when daylight returns."

She was silent a moment, with head again bent forward.

"What do you suppose became of the men who deserted the yacht?" she asked, her voice natural and quiet.

"Ashore, perhaps, by this time. They were certain they had done a good job, and eager to get away safely. Hobart never deemed it possible for us to get away alive. As it was, the escape was almost a miracle."

"A miracle?" softly. "Perhaps so, yet I know who accomplished it. I owe my life to you, Captain West."

She paused doubtfully, and then went on impulsively. "Won't you explain to me now what it all means? How you came to be here? and—why those men sought in this way to kill me?"

"You do not know?"

"Only in the vaguest way; is it my fortune? I have been held prisoner; lied to, and yet nothing has been made clear."

"It is a devilish conspiracy that has been plotted for a long while. There must be a dozen involved in it, one way or another, but, as near as I can learn, the chief devil, the brains of the gang, is the fellow named Hobart. Have you known him—long?"

"No," she said doubtfully, "not unless his other name was Jim. There was a fellow they called Jim. He was my junior after that woman looked me into a room."

"Where was this?"

"Why surely you must know. In that cottage where we stopped with Percival Coolidge."

He drew a deep breath, more thoroughly puzzled than ever. What could be her purpose to make so bold an effort to deceive? His heart sank, but he determined to go on, and learn how far she would carry this strange tale. Perhaps out of the welter he could discern some truth.

"The fellow's name is Jim, all right, Jim Hobart. The woman passes as his wife. You knew nothing of all this?"

"No; I only saw the man twice; he was very rough then, and swore when I questioned him."

"And the woman?"

"She would not talk, either; only once she told me that Percival Coolidge had committed suicide. That made me wonder, for I believed he had something to do with my being held there. What did he say when he returned to the note without me? What explanation did he make for my absence?"

"Explanation! He needed none; you came out of the cottage with him."

"I? What do you mean?"

"But I saw you with my own eyes, talked with you, and all three of us drove back to 'Fairlawn' together. My G—d, Miss Natalie, have you lost your mind? Do you even deny dismissing me from your service?"

She gazed at him through the gloom, utterly unable to comprehend.

"I must have; if what you say is true," she admitted. "For I certainly bare no such recollection."

He stared off into the black night, his lips pressed closely together. Could this be false? Could she sit there calmly, in the midst of such peril as surrounded them, and still deliberately endeavor to deceive?

"And you knew nothing of the death of Percival Coolidge, except what was told you by that woman?"

"She brought me a newspaper which I read; that was all I knew."

"And in that house on Wray street where I met you again last night. And you talked with me; tried to get me to quit following you. You surely haven't forgotten that already?"

She dropped her face wearily into her hands, and her voice sounded listless.

"I—I almost believe you are the crazy one, Captain West. I swear I have never knowingly met, or spoken to, you since we drove to that cottage on Sunday. I cannot believe what you say."

"Yet it is true, every word true," he asserted calmly. "Why else should I be here? You returned with us to 'Fairlawn,' and we chatted together pleasantly all the way. Later you seemed to change, and discharged me rather rudely. Then Percival Coolidge was killed—shot down by an assassin. You were at the inquest, and testified. The next day you discharged Sexton, and later he learned, and reported to me, that some one called you on the phone from Wray street, and wanted you to come over there at once. I found you there, and this fellow Hobart with you."

"But, Captain West, I never saw you; I never left the room in the third story where I watched him, except when they took me away in a machine to the yacht."

"You dropped a note in the alley, enclosed in a silver knife?"

"Yes, I did. Did you find it?"

"Sexton did, and that was what brought me here."

"But it is all so strange," she exclaimed despairingly. "How could I have done all these things, been in all these places, and yet know nothing about it? Could I have been drugged or influenced in some way by those people?"

"I do not believe you were either hypnotized or drugged. Good G—d; why did I not think of this solution before? I must have been blind; that was not you; I can recall a hundred little things now to convince me."

"What is it you mean?"

"Another woman loved your part; a woman most wonderfully like you, even to the voice. There is no other solution of the problem. And that reveals the plan of robbery—to get you out of the way, and then have her take the fortune."

She sat silent, motionless, apparently unable at once to grasp all the meaning in his words, then she pointed away into the distance.

"See, there is light over there," she exclaimed eagerly. "It must be the east, and it is morning."

He lifted his head, and looked where she pointed. A dull, gray light topped the waters, and the shoreline held a faint tinge of crimson, the sun glow accentuated the loneliness and for the moment left him dazed. Nothing appeared within range of vision to break the dreamy monotony of gray sea and sky. Neither felt he desire to speak; they could outlast one another across the desolation of waters, feeling their helplessness and peril.

Her head sank forward into her hands, as though she was thus shut out the whole world, and West, aroused by the slight movement, glanced quickly aside. His hand sought her own, and gripped for support, and closed over warmly.

"It cannot be as bad as it seems," he insisted, trying to still the words cheerfully. "I know the waters, and they are never long dazed. Luck will change, surely, peeps within the hour we shall be plied up, and can laugh at all this experience."

She lifted her head, and her eyes met frankly.

"I am not afraid," she protested. "Not physically, at least. By I have not felt fear since you held me, Captain West."

"But you are very tired."

"Perhaps so, yet I have thought about that. There are other things; you do not believe in me."

"Why say that?" he asked astonished. "There is no question of the kind between us now."

"Truly, is there not? What was it you believed of me—that that I was part of this conspiracy?"

"I do not know what I believed. If I actually believed anything, Miss Natalie," he explained rather lamely. "I cannot make the situation altogether clear even to myself. Under the circumstances, you cannot condemn me justly."

"Condemn! I do not. How could I? You must have kept faith in me, nevertheless, or you would never be here now. That is what seems marvelous to me—that you actually cared enough to believe."

"I realize now that I have," he said gravely. "Through it all I have kept a very large measure of faith in you."

"Why should that faith have survived?" she questioned persistently, as though doubt would not wholly leave her mind. "Surely there was never a madder story told than the one I told you, and I couldn't have proven an item of it."

"Yet it has shown itself true," he interrupted.

"You actually believe, then, that there is another woman—a counterfeit of myself?"

"It is the only theory feasible; you have convinced me of that. Will you believe what I say?"

"Impulsively."

"Perhaps it sounds like a fairy tale," he spoke frankly, his eyes seeking her own, all their surroundings forgotten in the eagerness of the moment, "but I will tell you the exact truth. Before this misunderstanding occurred you had confided in me, trusted me, although I was a stranger and I believed absolutely in your story. I had that basis to rest on. Then I got hold of various odds and ends of evidence which convinced me that something was wrong—that you were actually being conspired against. I even gained a suspicion that Percival Coolidge was the actual leader of the conspiracy. You could never have been made prisoner in that cottage without his complicity; he must have lured you there for that particular purpose, so that this other girl could take your place without danger of discovery. The reason for Percival's participation is only a guess, but my theory is the fellow had so juggled your fortune, and the time for final accounting was so near, he had to take a desperate chance in order to save himself."

"My own theory is that when Hobart learned what Percival Coolidge proposed doing, his own criminal tendencies told him that here was some easy money. The girl was undoubtedly wholly under his control; some denizen of the underworld probably. She had already played her part sufficiently well to convince Hobart of success. Why then, shouldn't he have this money instead of Percival? There was no reason except that Percival was in the way. That was why he was killed."

"And," she questioned breathlessly, "the man meant to murder me also?"

"Not at that time, in my judgment."

West answered thoughtfully. "Such an additional crime was not a part of the original plan. Once the money, and other property, were delivered to the fake Natalie, the casing in and get away would be easy; even the identity of the thieves would be concealed."

"But they did try to kill me."

"Yes, later, by the sinking of the yacht. Probably I am largely responsible for that. My appearance in Wray street must have been quite a shock, and when I succeeded in escaping from their trap there, Hobart very evidently lost his head completely. The knowledge that I was free, perhaps in communication with the police, led to your night trip to the Seminoles, and the secret sinking of the yacht. He had gone too far by then to hesitate at another murder."

"I—I think I understand now," she admitted. "How all this occurred; but why—why were you so persistent? There—there must have been a reason more compelling than a vague suspicion."

"There was—the most compelling impulse in the world."

"You mean faith in me?"

"Even more than that; love for you. Natalie, I love you, have loved you all the time, without fully realizing exactly what it meant. There have been times when I have doubted you, when I could not wholly escape the evidence that you were also concerned personally in this fraud. I have endeavored to withdraw from the case, to forget, and blot everything from memory. But something stronger than will prevented; I could not desert you; could not believe you were wilfully wrong. You understand what I mean."

"Yes," the words barely reaching him. "It was the other girl; she undermined your faith."

"That is the truth; yet how could it be, do you suppose? My very love should have enabled me to detect this difference."

She touched his arm with her hand, and under the slight pressure he looked aside at her.

"You know now," she said softly, "and I know. All this is past and gone between us. We are here alone, the sport of the waves, and I have no reason to be other than frank. I believe in you, Matthew West; in your honesty and manhood. You say you love me?"

"With all my heart and soul; it seems to me now I have always loved you—you came to me, the lady of my dreams."

Her eyes were wet with unshed tears, yet she smiled back into his face, her voice trembling as she answered:

"And I," she said slowly, "have had—"

—but of you place our moring in the garden together. How far away that seems."

"You mean you love me?"

"Yes; I love you; there is no word stronger, but I would speak it—Is that not enough?"

He held her in his arms, in spite of the trembling raft, tossed by the swell of the sea, and crushed her against him in the ardent strain of passion. An instant she held her head back, her eyes gazing straight into his; then, with a sigh of content, yielded, and their lips met, and clung.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

FARM BUREAU SERVICE

FREE TO MEMBERS

During the past three years the Farm Bureau through the circular letters and the Farm News has repeatedly made mention of the fact that all service the Farm Bureau can render is free of charge to members. In spite of this fact the solicitors signing new members for the new three year term have found many farmers in the county who ask "What does it cost to have my soil tested, my chickens culled, my seed corn looked over, a farm visit? and any number of other services that might be wanted. The membership fee of $15 a year $10 of which is for the Lee County Farm Bureau and $5.00 for the Illinois Agricultural Association pays for all service that the Farm Bureau service and the State Association can render. In no instance has the Farm Bureau, the Adviser or the office charged for any service rendered. Very naturally it is necessary to conserve time, and occasionally it is difficult to make a visit to an individual if it happens to be the only call in that community for the time being. Nevertheless it is always the desire of the Farm Bureau to serve its members promptly in any way possible.

Occasionally some of the solicitors would hear it said that the Farm Bureau had not done certain things, or that the advisers had not been on his farm and various other comments. Upon being asked if he had ever asked for any of these services, the usual answer would be "no" and naturally the Farm Bureau knew nothing about what may have been in the mind of this member.

It is the duty, therefore, of the member, first of all, to ask for what he wants. For instance, if you go into a cafeteria and pass along without stating just what meat is wanted, you will probably get by the long row of different meat dishes without any meat whatever. Likewise, if you do not help yourself to anything else on the shelves or trays you will probably go out hungry. Meetings are held, often as many as 200 a year by the Farm Bureau, and any meeting which the Farm Bureau arranges is free of charge. Any member who takes no interest in meetings, demonstrations, the Farm News, or anything that the Farm Bureau sends and gives all members an opportunity to partake of, will naturally be ignorant of the operation of the Farm Bureau. In other words, the summary arrived at by 125 men who met February 19, at the Leo Co. Farm Bureau office, after having spent from one to ten days apiece without pay, to reorganize the Leo Farm Bureau, shows the following: Five percent of the farmers are really too poor to join, 10 percent are too tight, 50 percent are misinformed or misunderstood the purposes of the organization, 10 percent were contrary and 25 percent wanted to ride a free horse. Therefore, 50 percent of the farmers who did not sign so these men decided, really misunderstood or were misinformed as to the work and activities, and the policies of the Farm Bureau. Naturally the Farm Bureau cannot go much over half way in bringing before a member, work which should be of interest, and you as a member must come the other half way.—The above is taken from the Lee County Farm Bureau News and meets conditions common in Lake county also.

TREATING SEED POTATOES

Now is the time for fanning and treating seed oats and dipping seed potatoes for scab and black scurf. The most effective solution to use for the potatoes is as follows: One ounce of Corrosive Sublimate to 8 gallons of water. Immerse the uncut potatoes for 1½ hours in this solution. This substance is more effective than formaldehyde but as it is quite poisonous care should be taken in keeping it away from stock.

In treating oats for smut use 1 pint formaldehyde to 10 gallons of water, then spray this on 80 bushels of oats, cover for 2 hours with a blanket after which spread out to dry. This is a sure treatment for both kinds of smut in oats and the loose smut in barley. Fanning and treating of seeds is about as sure a sign of spring as the hunking of the wild geese flying north, the flocks of mallards and pintail, also the song of the robin and the call of the blackbirds. Spring and seeding time are bound to come in spite of a little snow once in a while.

BOOST THE TON LITTER

There has been some loss of spring pigs but we hear of some very good litters. The Duroc Association is offering $50 in each county for the best ton litter so there is that reward for the best hog raiser in the country as well as a state prize in addition. The contest is for the production of a litter of pigs to weigh 2000 lbs or more at the age of 180 days. There are several prospects for this ton litter club both Duroc and Poland. May 15th is the last date to enter. Let the hog raisers of Lake County show what can be done here. It is hoped that the other breeds will offer prizes also.

STRAWBERRY CLUB

Several boys and girls have entered the strawberry club. Remember that you can get 200 good plants for $1.00 by joining the club. You have until April 20 to join the Strawberry Club. Interest in fruit growing of all kinds is on the increase in Lake County. We have the advantage of Michigan climate and the conditions here, besides the best market in the country right at our door. Strawberries yield well and an average price of $5 to $6 or more a crate seems assured which is much better than southern growers get. Near Zion farmers have ordered over 30,000 grape vine cuttings to set this spring, principally of the Concord variety. With market conditions at present better than Michigan can boast of, the fruit industry looks good in Lake County.

SOIL TESTS FREE TO MEMBERS

Sometimes we hear of Farm Bureau members who think soil tests are not made right on the farm or are not free to members of the bureau. Service of any kind is absolutely free to members, and soil tests will be made on any members' farm at any time if you will make a definite date with the adviser. We are getting a number of requests for this kind of service now.

Boys Were Taken for Girls

The Tonison twins, English dancers, whom W. H. Savage, theatrical producer, believed were sisters, and after making a fruitless trip to New York for a contract were returned to their native country, without a contract. They returned on the S. S. Berengaria on the last trip east.

Oakland School

(By Helen Martin)

The Oakland School, which is located on the first four corners, about one mile east of Leos Lake, was built in 1921. This Embossed Shal-tex brick building consists of a one large school room and basement.

The size of the building is 52 feet long and 25 feet wide. It is situated on a lot containing one acre, faces the south and is surrounded by a grove of white spruce trees, that affords a protection in cold weather.

In the front of the building are two glass doors leading into a hall. From the hall are two stairways, one going to the basement and one to the main floor where two spacious cloakrooms are found.

The class room is large and well lighted with windows all on the east side. The front and west sides have slate blackboards. There is a cabinet, Victrola, a large desk and chair, maps, cases, and charts in the front of the room. The room seats forty pupils. There are framed pictures on the walls and a cabinet containing specimens of trees grown in the district. In the back of the room is a bookcase built in the wall. Two doors lead from the back to two halls from which there are two entrances; one leading to two lavatory toilets, and the other to the rear where there are two small porches with stairways leading to the playgrounds.

The basement consists of three rooms. The furnace room, store room, and large room. The large room is used as a playroom, lunch room and a work room. In this room is a long table with benches around it at which the children eat their lunch and work at their raffle baskets. In one corner oilstove and cooking utensils. This room is well heated and lighted.

In the furnace room is a large Rudy furnace which has given entire satisfaction. It was installed by Victor Lohman of the Standard Sheet and Metal company of Waukegan. There are also two septic tanks and space for coal, wood and kindling.

There is a chain leading from the draft of the furnace to an electric battery which is connected with the classroom by wires fastened to a thermometer and a clock, which works automatically. When the room reaches 70 degrees, the battery releases and shuts off the draft. Then if rooms become cold, the drafts are opened.

From the outside is a large steel lined air shut, which takes cold air to the furnace where it is heated and then taken up through another shut to the class room, where it enters through an opening about two inches above the floor on the west side. A few feet away from this is another opening which leads to a flue which takes away the impure air.

There is a foot warmer in the back of the room, and a large opening on the west side where the heat from the furnace enters.

There is a garage for a car and a deep well which provides good drinking water.

The people of the district are very proud of their school. They hope in a few years to have a playground, equipment, water installed and an electric light system.

Our school is listed as a superior school and dedication exercises will be the next big event of the district.

100 PERCENT PRECAUTION

A guest stopping overnight at a ramshackle country hotel was shown to his room by a bellhop.

"I'm glad there's a fire escape," he said in some relief. "But what's the big idea in putting a prayer book in such a conspicuous place?"

"That's in case the fire gets too far ahead start," replied the youth.

LOUISIANA LOSES CHANCE TO UPBUID ITS DAIRYING

The dairy industry of southeastern Louisiana recently lost an excellent opportunity to improve the quality of the cattle kept in that section when the "Purebred Six Special" of the development department of the Illinois Central Railroad visited Baton Rouge and several other points in the state, and passed on without leaving any purebred dairy bulls in Louisiana.

This special toured Mississippi and Louisiana over the Illinois Central lines, demonstrating the possibilities for building up the dairy industry by the use of purebred sires. The railroad company had planned to leave a number of bulls in the two states, lending them to communities for the improvement of their dairy cattle. The special aroused much interest at several points in Louisiana where it stopped, and Louisianans were keenly disappointed when they learned that the officials in charge of the exhibit had decided, after looking over the territory, that the country was too generally infested with cattle fever ticks to warrant the risk of leaving any of the purebred sires in the state. The best development of dairying in that region thus depends on the eradication of ticks.

6.6 YEARS AVERAGE LIFE OF CORN-BELT ARM TRACTORS

Estimates upon the probable length of life of the tractor on Corn Belt farms have been obtained from 278 tractor owners by investigators in the United States Department of Agriculture, studying the cost of using tractors. The estimates range from 3 to 10 years, 81 owners estimating a life of 5 years. The average of all of the estimates received is 6.6 years. Some of these estimates may seem low, yet there are instances of operators who have considered their machine profitable after wearing them out in as brief a time as two years, under adverse soil conditions.

Even a low priced tractor doing a large amount of work each year may be expected to live at least 5 years of service if the machine is given intelligent care and kept in repair. Under adverse conditions this figure may be lower but under favorable conditions it may be higher. Information obtained in 1920 from 1,219 tractor owners showed that about half of the men who had bought their tractors in 1912 and 1917, one-third of those who purchased in 1914 and 1915 and one-fourth of those who purchased in 19 or earlier were still using them in field work. These men had owned their tractors on an average of 4½ yrs, and they estimated that the machine would last 5 years more.

From the replies received from these 1,219 farmers who had used their tractor 4 or more years, it was found that 3 had disposed of their first machine, 35 percent of them for cash and 66 percent in trade, usually for new tractors. The men who had sold their machines had kept them for an average period of a little more than 3 years and sold or traded them for approximately half the first cost.

TO MUCH FAITH

A southern darkey became converted and (some time his religious fervor was matter for awe among the brethren. One night, however, he showed up merrily with a lugubrious face.

"Ise bad," he announced mournfully from a platform. "Ise a doubter. Ise shined ain't got do faith in divino premoner what Brother Johnson got."

"Brother Johnson he got such faith in divino providence, dat jest to show off, whatat man do but climb a lightning in a thundah storm. Mo, I stays in below on terra cotta. Yaesah, backside."

Robert Savage Writes from Somers, Mont.

Somers, Mont.
April 7, 1923.

Dear C—

I am going to write to you because you are on our old playground. We think of the place many times, but we have just as good times out here and have much larger playgrounds. We are from 600 to 800 miles farther north than Antioch, but I think that the seasons are just about the same here. The winter is no colder here, but I think we had lots more snow than you had. Fourteen degrees below zero was our coldest. We had about ten days of it. We don't have any blizzards here. Probably the mountains and woods protect us.

Since the 21st of March we have had warm, sunshiny weather. It rained last night but is nice again for Easter. We live on the west side of Flathead lake, a mile and a half from the lake. The lake is 33 miles long and 16 miles wide. The Rocky Mountains are on the east side of the lake, but they don't look to be over 3 or 4 miles away. To the west of us there are other mountains.

In the spring the deer are very thick in the woods, and we see many of them. We saw seven in a bunch one day this spring. There are lots of coyotes in the woods also. They are very shy and we don't see one very often. Caught two in my trap this winter. We have shot two deer.

There are fir, spruce, pine and tamarack trees in the woods here. There are also some poplar, birch and mountain maple. There are a great many different kinds of birds here, a good many that I don't know the names of. The bluejays here are different. They call them the Rocky Mountain blue jay. They are a dark navy blue, otherwise they are just the same as the other kind. There are more bluebirds and robins here than back there. A few days ago we saw a flock of robins like we see blackbirds in the fall. They lit in our garden and yard, and must have been deciding where they were going to locate for the summer. There are magpies here also. They are a large black and white bird with a long tail. They are inquisitive and mischievous. Grouse are very plentiful through the woods. There are some Chinese pheasants too. There is a creek about a mile from our place where Richard and I go fishing. We catch eastern brook trout, mountain rainbow, native and flat trout. In the lake there are salmon, bull trout, white fish and many other kinds.

We walk a mile and three-quarters to school. All winter we had hot lunches at school, but since it got warm this spring they are discontinued. Just now we are practicing stunts for a track meet, running, jumping, climbing, etc.

After attending the Easter exercises this forenoon another boy and I went picking flowers, the first flowers I have seen this spring.

This is a great fruit country, especially for apples, cherries and sweet cherries. People are working now at their orchards, trimming the trees. We have made a little garden already.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS

Little Harold had just returned from a trip with his parents. Somewhere during the journey he had picked up some highly decorative phrases which he proceeded to try out on his small sister. She was very properly shocked.

"Harold!" she exclaimed. "You'll never go to Heaven if you use such naughty words."

"Well," replied Harold resignedly. "I've just been to New York, Boston, Chicago and Atlantic City. Gosh! A fellow can't expect to go everywhere, can he?"

TOO MUCH EFFICIENCY

There had been six candidates at the examination for promotion to corporal and five had passed with flying colors. The sleeve of the sixth—apparently the most efficient of all—was as yet unadorned with chevrons.

"What's the matter with Fussay, anyway?" tolerantly asked one of the successful candidates.

"Well, I'll tell you," explained another. "Fussay's a good guy and a hard worker and all that, but—oh, well, he's the kind of a goof who dries off old safety razor blades before he throws them away."

A LEADING QUESTION

Professor Cyniddu was interrupted during an interesting and instructive chemical investigation by the ringing of his telephone.

"Hello," said a sweet feminine voice at the other end. "Professor Cyniddu? This is the Kneen Clothing store. That pair of trousers you ordered last Thursday have just come."

"Ah—er—yes?" parried the professor absent-mindedly. "And—ah—er—do they fit?"

"Turning from the city newspapers to the rural exchanges which come to our desk is like stepping from the slums full of vile odors into an old-fashioned garden sweet with honey-suckle and the scent of perennial flowers. The pages of the big dailies are so full of murders, thievery, immorality, the breaking up of homes by infidelity and selfishness that the better news is obscured. One puts the paper aside with a feeling of depression and heartache that the world is so full of such terrible and unhappy things.

"Then, picking up the papers that record the happenings of the smaller towns around us one gains renewed faith in life. Here are set forth only that which uplifts a community—the activities of the business men, the church news, the civic good accomplished by the women, school items, the happy social gatherings of the people, the marriages, births and deaths, farmers' items and all the thousand and one daily occurrences that make up the simple annals of the great common people who are really the foundation of this broad country of ours.

"Scandals are seldom published in the country newspapers, but it is so happens that decency so demands it the uglier details are omitted, or the given a kindly touch that is widely different from the unfeeling publicity of the city press. No wonder. The offenders may be our neighbors, or people we have rubbed elbows with all our lives. They are real human beings, while to the great city dailies they are merely grains of a sort that are ground out hourly in their news mill."

"PRIMITIVE LOVER" AT CRYSTAL SUNDAY

Drop the dishes, you romantic wives. Take old stay-at-home hubby to see this. You'll get lots of laughs, and he'll get a lesson—but not the kind you expect. Conale Talmadge scores another happy hit in "The Primitive Lover," with both Kenneth Harlan and Harrison Ford playing opposite her. Both of them, mind you. Then look at this—Frances Marion adapted it, and Sidney A. Franklin, who directed "Smilin' Through" for Norma Talmadge, brought it to the screen. All that is a real combination of talent.

A new fire whistle, recently given a try-out at Woodstock, has been found unsatisfactory. While sounding a recent fire, the alarm was heard for miles around Woodstock, but was not detected by some of the city firemen. The whistle has been sent back and a larger one ordered.

Property damage of more than $10,000 resulted from the deralement of a time freight on the Soo line at Sheridan, between Stevens Point and Waupaca, according to divisional railroad officials. Thirty-four out of forty-six freight cars were wrecked, all being loaded heavily with lumber and flour, canned goods and other merchandise.

Observations made at Yerkes observatory at Williams Bay, has revealed a comet's tail of unusual size and length. The fact that the tail, which is said to be 1,000,000 miles in length, points towards the sun instead of in the customary opposite direction, is regarded as a remarkable phenomenon.

A. J. Gafke, county soil expert, has been re-engaged for another year by the McHenry County Farm Bureau organization at a salary of $3,700.

The village of Barrington thus far has been unable to solve how the Northwest highway should pass thru this municipality.

The state of Illinois has more automobiles than any nation in the world, it being estimated that more than 750,000 machines will be licensed here this year.

The Southern Wisconsin Electric Company last week issued a report for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1922, showing an increase in gross earnings as compared with the year 1921 of $40,127.88, or more than 14 per cent.

"About one hundred million dollars in war savings stamps and certificates due and payable on January 1, 1923, are still outstanding," said Lew Wallace, Jr., director of the United States government savings system. "That means loss of interest for more than three months, although the government has done everything possible to induce the people to exchange those stamps for the new Treasury Savings Certificates."

The assembly at Madison has passed and sent to the senate the state affairs committee a bill making it a misdemeanor for any person to pluck, destroy, sell or buy any lotus plant growing on public property or water of the state. The penalty would be a $100 fine or six months' imprisonment. The lilies are found in Wisconsin in a lake or island in the Mississippi river, near Prairie du Chien, also in Kenosha county in lakes near Edgerton and thousands of lotus plants are destroyed or carried away every year by persons from other states.

Arrival and storage of 40 carloads of cement at Lake Villa has made it possible for Contractor E. H. Merrick to start construction work next week on the Fox Lake-Grayslake road, a continuation of Grand avenue, and the Grayslake state project, route No. 21.

Mr. Merrick will need only about eight more carloads of cement to do the entire job and this has been promised for next week's delivery.

The contractor will not start actual pouring of concrete next week but the unloading of material and stock piling will be done. This will make possible the rushing of the concreting work when the weather permits.

The project to be completed is about two miles in length.

The state is furnishing enough cement to permit the completion of projects started in 1922, but there is a serious shortage in the demand for this year's work.

Members of the road and bridge committee met recently in the office of County Superintendent of Highways Charles R. Russell, rejected two bids on the proposed pavement of Milwaukee road north of the Spaulding school house, Round Lake road and the road west from Highway to the Waukegan road.

The bids, the only ones received for the work, were sent in by J. Wade, contractor, now working on the Lake Villa road. Both bids were said to be above the estimate.

No bid was received on the Highway road. The bid on the Round Lake road was in the neighborhood of $59,000 and on the Milwaukee road approximately $99,000.

The committee ordered the work to be readvertised.

Transplanting of Trees

The Public Service Company maintains a forestry department which is in charge of tree trimming operations frequently necessary in the work of stringing overhead wires. H. J. Eddy, head of the department, is a graduate forester and a well known authority on the subject. He contributes to the forthcoming issue of the News, the company's paper, an article on transplanting trees which is of interest to the residents of communities in the company's territory, for, almost without exception these towns are distinguished for their fine trees.

Extracts from Mr. Eddy's article follow:

Too little attention is given to the details of transplanting. It is quite essential that the soil conditions should be suitable for the growth of the particular species of tree planted, and in the selection of material for planting there is great need of more care. A large amount of poor material is constantly being used, besides which, injudicious use of the knife and pruning shears maims many trees for life. Trees 6 to 8 feet high are usually too small for street planting, not being so well adapted to street conditions as large ones ranging from 2 to 4 to 6 inches in diameter. Moreover, by using larger trees one can obtain a better idea of their future development and configuration.

The life cycle of trees are by no means identical even in the same species. Much more attention should be given to the type of tree transplanted than is generally given. The same species varies greatly in different localities. Where much desirable native material exists this can be used to advantage for street planting, and if carefully handled, it will prove successful.

Personal funds do not always allow the appropriation of a large sum of money for transplanting trees, and one must do the best he can with the conditions under which he has to labor. Special attention, therefore, should be given to the adaptability of certain species to the condition at hand, since the cost of extensive preparation and soil modification is too often beyond the funds allowed for this purpose. But remember, it would be better to prepare tree beds two to three feet deep and twenty to thirty feet square, filled with good loamy soil where the present ground is dry and sandy gravel, even if the expense of doing so would be so great that only one tree a year could be planted.

Few trees, however, outside of those planted in special arboreta and on a few private estates receive any such treatment. It must be borne in mind in planting that shade trees are always under more or less disadvantageous conditions as regards atmosphere and soil. Hence it is of the greatest importance that they should be aided as much as possible, and the time is not far distant when much more specific methods must be employed in the planting of street trees in thickly settled communities. Even at the present time, where ideal conditions are sought much more money is spent in preparation for transplanting than in purchase of the trees. The majority of trees which are planted are not supplied with loam or placed in holes over two or three feet wide and fifteen feet deep, and some of them are given space only large enough to contain their roots. Loosening up the soil to a considerable depth is very important, as shown by the results of the use of dynamite in the preparation of soil for transplanting. A hole 5 to 6 feet wide by 20 inches deep in any case should be the smallest used, and it should be as much larger as can be afforded.

Mussolini's Private Plane

Premier Mussolini seated in his private aeroplane before leaving Milan, Italy, on a secret mission. The Italian premier is greatly interested in aviation and watches eagerly the progress being made in the air.

When digging up young trees the roots should be preserved as much as possible, and the more earth taken up with the roots the better. The roots should not be exposed to sun and wind, and if possible should be kept covered and moist. For this purpose damp straw, bagging or sphagnum moss may be used.

It is usually the practice to place the best side of the tree toward the south, since the light conditions on the south side are better, and naturally better growth results. It is also advisable to lean a tree toward the direction of the prevailing winds, and if these are strong enough to interfere with the growth of the tree, it should be fastened to a long stake. Trees obtained from the fields where they have been growing close together have long, slender shafts, and are top heavy. When such trees are planted in windy situations it is necessary to support them by stakes.

When the ground is prepared for planting, the injured roots should be recut so that healing may take place, and before being covered they should be properly arranged in the soil. According to good authorities trees should never be planted deeper than they originally grew, and too deep planting often causes their death. It is more convenient for two men to set out a tree than one, as one can hold the tree in the proper position while the other is filling the soil in around the roots.

The top soil, if of good quality, may be used, but it is better to discard the poorer subsoil and replace it with loam. Much depends, however, upon the nature of the subsoil, and whether the species is adapted to grow in it. In any planting the best soil should be placed at the bottom of the hole or under the roots, and the soil when properly pulverized may be used, care being taken not to interfere too much with the soil capillarity. The poorer soil which covers the roots may be enriched and its texture improved by working in manure or other organic matter. Manure, however, should be sparingly used and thoroughly incorporated with the loam, care being taken not to bring it in too close contact with the roots. Transplanting might make good use of composted street cleanings and if land is available for a small nursery, it can be used to good advantage by tree wardens and foresters.

When a tree is set out the soil about the roots should be well age the formation of roots at the base of the tree. After the tree is set out a mulching of hay, straw or horse manure containing considerable straw, may be used to help conserve the moisture in the soil and to keep down the grass and weeds which rob the soil of its moisture and food. A general tendency has been to plant street trees rather closely, with the idea in some cases of cutting every other one when it should become necessary. The courage to do this when the time comes is often unfortunately lacking, however, and the trees are allowed to grow and crowd one another until it becomes too late to thin them out.

Long Distance Telephone Calls at Low Rates

ON many long distance telephone calls the party wanted is present and therefore reached promptly at the number or location called. Had the call been made by number or by giving the name of the subscriber at whose telephone you expect to reach your party, and without asking for a particular person wanted, that person might have been reached just the same.

This fact, proved by our long experience, has suggested a class of long distance service, which we call "station-to-station" service, and which we are able to supply at about twenty per cent less than the ordinary, or "person-to-person" service.

In many cases it is not necessary to talk to a particular person. The business can be transacted with some one else, or a message which meets the purposes of the call can be left.

On social calls, particularly home calls, it is often just as satisfactory to talk to any one who may be at home.

"Station-to-station" calls meet all these situations and many others. We suggest that you study your long distance telephone requirements with a view to using this service.

The rates for "station-to-station" calls are about twenty per cent lower than for "person-to-person" calls. During the evening (8:30 P. M. to midnight), a still further reduction is made on "station-to-station" calls. From midnight to 4:30 A. M. the night rate on "station-to-station" calls is about one-fourth the day rate. (The minimum reduced rate on these messages is 25 cents).

To make a "station-to-station" call, ask the operator for "long distance" and when "long distance" answers, give her your name and telephone number and tell her you wish to make a "station-to-station" call to—(giving first the distant city or town and then the telephone number). If you do not know the number give the name and address under which the telephone probably is listed. It will then be understood that you will talk to any one who answers. The charge begins when the distant telephone is answered.

For further information call "Long Distance" who will quote "station-to-station" rates to any point.

St. Ignatius' Church News

Next Sunday the services in this church will be as usual. Church school at 9:45, morning prayer and address at 11:00.

As the confirmation class will be over at that time, there will be no meeting in the afternoon in the church.

Let us hope that the weather will be favorable in the future on Sundays, and that a goodly number of people will be inspired to attend the services in the church.

At the present writing, we are expecting Bishop Anderson to visit us on Wednesday evening of this week for confirmation, and to celebrate the holy communion on Thursday morning for the whole parish. This is perhaps the most auspicious occasion of the year for this mission, as Bishop Anderson has not made a visitation here for more than five years.

Urges Kindness to Animals

Don't leave your home for the summer holidays and take everything along but the cat. Find suitable parking space for kitty before you leave.

If the family dog is worn out with old age, or if you're tired of him, don't chase it away from home. Use the same care in finding it a new home as you would a child. Remember, a dog needs a better home than does a cat.

Don't leave the electric lights gleaming in the eyes of your canary, fatigued after a day of melody. Don't make it breathe overheated air that would stifle an elephant.

These are among the suggestions made to the public by George A. H. Scott, counsel and secretary of the Illinois Humane society, at the outset of a national "Be Kind to Animals Week," observed in all important cities throughout the land. No formal rites will be held locally, Mr. Scott said, the observance consisting chiefly in the distribution of literature to schools, and possibly a few sermons in the pulpits next Sunday.

"Kindness to animals in the last few years has increased, largely because of economic pressure," Mr. Scott said. "It has been found cheaper to buy a good horse and treat it well than to buy poor ones and mistreat them."

FOR HIS IDLE CHATTER

They arrived home from the party. Friend wife took off her hat and slammed it on the floor. Then she confronted her hubby.

"I'll never take you to another party as long as I live!" she hissed. "Why?" he calmly wanted to know. "You asked Mrs. Jones how her husband was standing the heat."

"Well?"

"Well, her husband has been dead two months."

Mother—How many times have I told you not to play with that horrid Baxter boy?

Aggrieved Willie—What do you think I am anyway, ma—an adding machine?

Methodist Episcopal Church News

Go to church. You cannot afford to miss the richness of life that comes to the heart in attendance upon the services of God's house, at any time it is possible to be present.

The communion last Sunday morning was an occasion of earnest heart-searching and deep religious feeling. Surely, every one who was present will be a better Christian for having been in that service. As a preparation of the hearts of all for the communion, a period of time was given to earnest and thoughtful self-examination by comparing the motives and practices of life with the commandments. The ten commandments and certain other vital laws of God were thoughtfully read that each might test his own life thereby and see whether he was living by those laws, so that he might at once make whatever changes needed to get into right relation with God upon the basis of complete, unwavering obedience to all God's laws and will.

The evening service emphasized the greatness of the difference between the Christian life and the life that is not Christian. It was shown that the Christian life as taught by Christ and His apostles is a life all aglow and aflame with holy enthusiasm, full of deepest peace and sweetest joy, a channel of spiritual power. This is the only Christian life described in the New Testament. The real, full Christian life set forth in the New Testament is so good, so happy, so sure of high destiny that it must be a senseless wonder that any one in his right mind should ever be indifferent about seeking it with all the earnestness and determination possible to him.

An earnest effort is being made to make the services every Sunday, both morning and evening as full of real help for the daily life of all who attend as is possible. Come to the services and get the help your life needs and at the same time help to encourage others.

Watch the Sunday School pick up now. Everybody come and study God's good word together and make your life rich with finer riches than gold and diamonds.

DUG HIS OWN GRAVE

It was a sunny, lazy day in June. The streets of the little Alabama town were nearly deserted. Along the sidewalk there strolled a courtly gentleman in the frock coat and wide-brimmed hat of Southern colonial.

A shifty-eyed darky, much the worse for bootlegger stuff, shambled along in the opposite direction. As the two passed, the darky spoke angrily and drunkenly to the colonial, "Git outa ma way, yo' pore white trash, I se a mean nigger."

They buried the darky the next day down in the little cemetery by the river.

At the trial of the colonial, the jury deliberated for two entire minutes. Then they filed in and announced that they had reached a verdict.

The judge called for the verdict.

The foreman of the jury arose and in a calm, unperturbed manner, spat in the nearest cuspidor.

"Sulcido," he said.

PREACHES FOR MUTES

Fowler Heifer Makes Record in 25-Day Test

A 4-year-old heifer, sired by Frank T. Fowler's bull "Clover Mead King Spofford," grand champion at the fair, where he defeated bulls of all breeds, one costing $6,000, has just completed a 25 day test at Pinchurst Farm, Sheboygan Falls, Wis., her owner.

"Princess Spofford Pauline" is the name of this great heifer. In 7 days she gave 709.8 lbs. milk and 31.96 lbs. butter. At the end of the 25th day she had given 2,603.8 lbs. milk (over 37 3-gallon cans)—over 100 lbs. per day.

Mr. Fowler's bull is now in the coveted place desired by all breeders, i. e. to have over 30 lb. daughters. Besides this wonderful heifer, "Clover Mead King Spofford" is the sire of a 3-year-old heifer, who made over 26 lbs. butter in 7 days on 498 lbs. milk (over 70 lbs. per day)—more milk than her 31.96 lbs. sister above at the same age. This bull has 6 A. R. O. daughters and some 8 more will be officially tested this year.

Mr. Fowler has succeeded in getting 10 young daughters and "one young son" by his sire and he seems to feel he has met with unusual good fortune. His "Rose Crigline Mercedes" was the highest record cow in the state in January for butterfat and his herd was within 15 oz. butterfat, leading all herds in the Cow Testing Association of Illinois as officially reported by the University of Illinois. Little do the people realize what a large number of fine herds of all breeds dairy cattle there are in Lake County.

Lake Villa in Opening Game April 29

The Lake Villa baseball squad will work out on their local grounds Sunday, April 23. This will be the first gathering together of the County Champs for team practice. The boys, however, have been working hard individually to get themselves in shape. Bixby and Sorenson have been playing indoor ball all season and Bix reports that he is in midsummer form right now. Ray Saube reports that he has been working out regularly with the Chicago Normal team and is ready to go. Joe Gross has been in steady training all spring and as he does not join the champs until June 1st, there is no concern about his condition.

The Waukegan boys, Ahlstrom, Holstein, Walzac, Philant and Tornquist also Zenner, the local lad, have had plenty of practice to take the kinks out of their arms and the soreness out of their legs.

The first game to be played by the Lake Villa team this year will be on their home grounds Sunday, April 29, game called at 2:15 p. m. The visiting team will be "Somers Specials," a Wisconsin team. This same team played at Lake Villa last year, June 18th, putting up a good, clean, snappy game, being defeated, however, 4 to 0 by the home boys.

This will be the beginning of a season of thrills for the fans. We predict an unusual amount of interest this year in baseball for Lake County, and well there should be for there are several representative teams of unusual strength, comparing, we should say, very well with the Chicago semi-pro outfits, and the rivalry between local towns has already commenced to boil over.

ITS DESTINY

Two Negro boys in a southern city met on the street, each wearing a new suit. One asked: "How much do they set you back for dem clo's?"

"Fo'ty dollahs," was the response.

"Fo'ty dollahs?"

"Yes, sah—fo'ty dollahs."

"Look at me," said the first. "I've got on a suit w'at's most' porzactly like yours, and I don't pay but ten dollahs fuh mine. Somebody shore flimflammed you."

The possessor of the $40 suit took hold of one of the coat sleeves of the $10 suit and pulled on it. It stretched. Then straightening up, he said: "See here, boy, the fast big rain yo' gets ketcht out in dat coat of yours is gwine to say: 'Good-by niggah! F'om now on I've gwine be yo' vest!'" —Judge.

THE OTHER CAR

"But the Boile-Boast auto people guarantee their car for life," objected a prospective motor purchaser to a salesman for the Flivver Five.

"I know they do," he replied calmly. "But our car is guaranteed for a whole year."

will not increase prices until May 1st

Firestone Prices on Fabric and Cord Passenger Car Tires and Tubes, also Solid and Pneumatic Truck Tires Will Advance May 1st

The postponement of this price revision is possible only because of our realization of the price danger in the British Crude Rubber Restriction Act which became effective November 1, 1922. We were fortunate in our rubber purchases before the Restriction Act increased the price of crude rubber 150%.

We have always endeavored to champion the cause of better made tires delivered at lowest cost to the tire user by economic manufacturing and distribution. And we are glad of the opportunity to give the car-owner the additional saving at this time.

Firestone Cords embody certain special processes which result in their producing mileage records, heretofore unheard-of in the industry. Among the more important of these superior methods are blending, tempering, air-bag cure and double gum-dipping.

Firestone Dealers are co-operating with us in our movement to supply your needs at present prices as long as their stock lasts and we have advised our dealers that we will supply them with additional tires this month only so far as our output will permit.

See the nearest Firestone Dealer. Purchase a set of these Gum-Dipped Cords. Prove for yourself their remarkable mileage advantages and easy riding qualities.
